The MCLS trainee community connects trainees from all around the globe to foster mathematical cognition and learning and promote the communication of scientific research on these topics. We aim to provide support and create opportunities for all people who consider themselves to be trainees, including all students or early career researchers (undergrads, postgrads, postdocs) without a full-time faculty position.

In our online special events, at the yearly MCLS conference, and on social media, we connect with each other to collaborate in new projects, help each other, exchange our knowledge, and discuss research. Follow us on social media to be the first to know about our upcoming online special events held in English language, where participation is for free:
