

Workshop: Relations between space, language, and numbers

Time Wednesday, April 10th, to Friday, April 12th, in 2024
Location Department of Psychology, University of Tübingen, Schleichstr. 4, 72076 Tübingen, Germany

Space, language, and numbers play an essential role in our information society. Research in Psychology, Cognitive Science, and Linguistics investigates how humans perceive, process, and mentally represent them. However, the relation between space, language, and numbers is still unclear and often only looked at from the perspective of one discipline. In this workshop, both PhD students and established researchers from Psychology, Cognitive Science, and Linguistics are invited to foster their knowledge about the three domains and to shed light on the relation between them. In addition, different methodologies and experimental paradigms will be introduced, and networking opportunities will be offered. In particular, we invite you to present your own research about space, language, numbers, and relations between them on a poster. We welcome you to attend keynote talks, interactive methodological talks with Q&A, a podium discussion, a meet-the-expert-session, a poster session, and a social networking event in Tübingen!
